Episode #3.

* * *

Landow strives to hold up the center tent pole but the violence of the storm throws it down. Then he dashes to the rescue of the girl. Seizing her from the midst of the mad flames, he carries her to safety.

Adams is frantically dashing around to save as much of his property as he can. He calls his followers together to his aid. While this is going on, a large monkey hobbles across the lot and climbs through the window of his wagon-room. Seeing some shoes on the floor, the monkey seizes one of them- the very one which secrets the mysterious and valuable jewel.

Dragging the shoe with it, the monkey climbs out again and lets it drop in the mid. At this time the mystery-man visits the Hindus and warns them to strike- telling them that Adams' wagon is empty and that his shoe contains the jewel they seek.

They are surprised to find the shoe missing and leave before Adams can arrive. After this event a local gambler frames with Adams to have Landow stage a fight with his own fighter. They play to bet heavily on the local pride and declare him the winner when Landow, who is to be abducted, should fail to appear when the bell rings for action.

Landow is taken to the exhibition place in a long, round-about route. He discovers the trick. As a result of a bitter battle, he falls over a steep, long cliff.
